

Samsung is the first company to get the new Nemko Europe certificate

Tuesday, March 24, 2015

Mr Kyoungil Min, Managing Director Samsung Electronics Nordics and Ms Grete Aspelund, Nemko Group CEO holding the first Nemko Europe certificate at the certification ceremony in Oslo

Nemko Europe is the first certification service in the industry to cover the key EU environmental product directives; Restriction of Hazardous Substances (RoHs) and Energy related Products (ErP) together with the existing directives for telecom, electrical safety and EMC.

It also includes a suite of business critical features:

- Testing of product and verification of documentation
- Updates according to relevant standards and directives
- Prefilled EU Declaration of Conformity
- 10 years storage of mandatory CE Technical Construction File
- Nemko Certificate for electrical safety and EMC
- Factory inspection for valid certificates

Compliance without complexity

- Manufacturers and importers are finding the compliance process increasingly complex with the new RoHs and ErP directives. With this new service, Nemko takes care of all the processes and procedures necessary to comply – and stay compliant – with all five CE marking directives.

Demonstrating Samsung's environmental focus

Samsung [1] has been a client with Nemko for more than 25 years, and the new Nemko Europe certification service supports their ambitious environmental efforts. The first products to receive the Nemko European certificate are Samsung TV Monitors type LS 27 D85 and LS 32 D85.
